

The Morning Chronicle

London, England

Thursday, May 8, 1845

No. 23566, p.5

Some further particulars of the dreadful loss of the steamer Swallow on the Hudson are published in the Albany papers of the 12th ult. There seems to be blame attached to all concerned with this ill-fated boat. She has now been under water five days, and no effort made to raise her, although it is supposed that several bodies are yet on her cabin. The more we hear of this shocking affair, the more culpable appears the conduct of William Burnett, the pilot.