FAITHFUL TO OBEY ORDERS.—About 1835 the steamer Erie was burned on Lake Erie. — When the fire was discovered, the captain ordered a reliable helmsman to stand at the wheel until further orders. Before the Coroner's jury it was in evidence that this man stood at his post until the flames consumed him. The Captain testified he was a man "faithful to obey orders," and not being recalled from his post, must have perished. We find in the Adrian (Mich.) Watchtower a similar case related as having occurred during the severe cold weather of the past winter.
